GLENDAL, CAL., NOVEMBER 21, 1908

SENATOR WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN OF NEBRASKA.

It sounds well; in fact Mr. Bryan always sounds well. Indeed, it may truly be said that as a sounder he is a tremendous success. Sound has its uses as well as substance, and people do not quickly tire of the skilful framer of mellifluous sentences. Should the state of Nebraska desire to embalm Mr. Bryan in the toga of a United States senator, the rest of the world can well afford to bear it with resignation, at least. He will not be a misfit in that somewhat ponderous body which has of recent years been but a suggestion of that form in which stood in years not long gone by, some of the best exemplars of the great art of oratory. But that Mr. Bryan will add greatly to the usefulness of that body, is a subject in regard to which it may not be reasonable to express a doubt. He has in times past foretold very eloquently and specifically, disasters to come from a failure to adopt his policy and take his advice, and he may be depended upon to "view with alarm," many a time and oft the dire results to follow the action proposed by political opponents. That the things foretold have never materialized as scheduled by Mr. Bryan, will not detract in the least from the admiration which is and always will be accorded to him by his enthusiastic adherents. He has within the last few years well qualified himself to serve in the senate, by accumulating a very snug competency, not sufficient to put him in a class with the millionaires of that body, but enough to enable him to dress and play the part to the satisfaction of those "common people" who subscribe for the "Commoner." Let Nebraska make him senator; it will add in a measure to the gaiety of nations!

OPPORTUNITIES FOR YOUNG MEN.

Some citizens of Glendale who have recently returned from a visit to their old home state, Iowa, report in a part of the state, at least, a large corn crop, the yield in some cases being as high as eighty bushels per acre, the price being at present about 5 cents per bushel. The development of this particular industry in that state marks a triumph for scientific farming. For many years farmers planted and harvested their corn crop there as farmers to a great extent continue to do elsewhere, trusting to Providence and a rich soil to give them results. Then it occurred to some one that the results were not so satisfactory as they should be and the agricultural colleges took the matter up systematically and by a series of experiments demonstrated the fact that without increasing the acreage, it was possible to largely increase the crop. The next thing was to instruct the farmers and get them interested in the subject; a matter which required a great deal of systematic work, but it was finally done and at present in the state of Iowa, the farmers take a general, intelligent and enthusiastic interest in the effort to get from the soil all that it is capable of producing. The result has been a very large increase in the output of corn per acre throughout the state, and efforts to secure still better results, continue. The greatest care is exercised in the selection of seed in the first place and then the use of the clover crop as a fertilizer has become generally recognized. The clovers, as is now generally known, possess the property of extracting nitrogen from the atmosphere and storing it in the soil, adding to its fertility instead of exhausting it. This practical result of applying scientific methods to farming, suggests great possibilities and indicates that the successful farmer of the present day must possess more scientific knowledge than was in times past considered essential. It raises also the serious question as to whether a great many of our young men who are now securing the education afforded by the public schools and aiming at a general university course, might not to their own personal advantage and to that of the world at large, be better employed in preparing themselves to get a living out of the soil. Our agricultural colleges are not as popular as they should be; and although it may be considered rank heresy by some, to say it, we believe that it will soon be realized that we are having a little too much of the "higher education." We do not believe it to be necessary for the practical work of the world, that our young people should spend so many years in the schoolroom as our present school system requires, and the great field of usefulness opened up by the achievements of science in agriculture, should present to our young men a prospect fully as alluring as the pursuit of the higher mathematics and the dead languages. The tendency of our present educational system as generally calculated to drive young men to the cities, and anything that would have the effect of turning them while yet alive "back to the soil," should be encouraged. If "Scientific Agriculture" can clearly be demonstrated, as we believe it can, to be a lucrative calling, we may naturally hope to see our young men turn towards it in increasing numbers.

I. O. G. T. ENTERTAINS.

Friday evening, members of the local lodge of Good Templars, with a large number of their friends, entertained with a pleasant evening at G. A. R. hall. For several months past, owing to the many social functions and other circumstances, the interest in this organization, which has done so much good in the valley, has waned.

Mrs. L. C. Rice, Robert Taylor and Frank Guernsey are endeavoring to create anew an enthusiasm in the society and they realize that owing to the rapid growth of the Valley the organization can ill afford to surrender the charter. The trustees of the G. A. R. hall, Miss Cora Hickman, Mrs. Delia Haggood and Miss Flora Chandler, are aiding by furnishing the use of the hall, the Good Templars merely paying the electric light bill.

Six new members were added to the list Friday night, and Mrs. Dice and Mr. Taylor urge all who can to come and help at the meetings, which are held every Friday night at G. A. R. hall. The youth of the present will be the men and women of tomorrow.

The program given Friday evening
